

Sandaway
Oxford
(Late 19th Century)

T-317

Sandaway, now part of the Robert Morris Inn, is one of the largest and most unusually composed structures in Oxford. The main block is 2½ stories with a bell-cast gambrel roof pierced by dormers. There is a two-story porch across the river-front facade; its ground story continues with a bracketed cornice around to the street elevation. To the rear are a two-story, three-bay addition, surrounded by a Second Empire style mansard roof, and a one-story wing.
